AUGURAL COMMITTEE.

Previous Oceasions-The Ball Fund.

Before leaving the city last night for a few days rest, to be spent at Old Point Comfort, Chairman John Joy Edson of the inaugural committee announced that the receipts from all sources would more than meet the expenses of the committee. In planning the expenditures of the inaugural committee Mr. Edson figured upon a close margin. More money was expended this time, perhaps, than on any similar occasion of late years, the aggregate amounting to about $75,000, this including $14,000 spent in the erection of the Court of Honor and reviewing stands. The stands in the court were sold out the day of the inauguration, and hence the venture proved successful, the receipts being about $18,000, a profit of $4,000. The profit indicated includes the money received for the three stands privileged on Pennsylvania avenue east of 15th

Pianola Recital.

The pianola and aeolian recital at Knabe Hall last night was more enjoyable than any that has preceded it. Mr. H. Higginbottom, who plays these two instruments, was unusually happy in his selections, two numbers being particularly well received. viz., the Chopin "Berceuse" and the "William Tell Overture." Perhaps the feature of the evening was the singing of Mrs. Ward, a New York vocalist, who was especially engaged for this recital. She sang Mrs. Beach's "Ecstacy," the grea aria from Von Weber's "Der Freischutz, oito's prologue to "Mephistofele" and Von lelitz's "Secret Greetings." Her work was highly satisfactory and she was re-warded with emphatic applause.

JOSEPH SESSFORD DEAD

WIDELY KNOWN AND GENERALLY POPULAR WASHINGTONIAN.

Mr. Joseph Stevenson Sessford of the National Museum died yesterday at his residence, No. 147 Carroll street southeast. after an illness of two months. The funeral will take place at 2 o'clock p.m. Monday and interment will be made in Congressional cemetery.

Mr. Sessford was born in Washington sixty-seven years ago and had resided here continuously since. His parents came to the District in 1820, from Newcastle, England, but were originally Scotch, the famfly being prominent in Roxburgh just across the English border. He became popular early in life and continued so until the end. His tall, spare figure-he was six feet five inches in height-was a familiar one to Washingtonians and his genial disposition, charitable nature and fund of pleasant anecdote made him generally liked and assured of welcome wherever he Interesting Theatrical Experience. Previous to entering the government service in the National Museum, which was about twenty years ago. Mr. Sessford was prominently identified with several of the local theaters in responsible positions. He was the assistant treasurer of the old Washington Theater, then a leading play-house, that was formerly Carusi's saloon and is now the Lyceum Theater, and dur-ing the war took the same position with Ford's Theater on 10th street and was in the box office the night that John Wilkes Booth shot President Lincoln. His last theatrical connection was with the National, from which he retired to take the place he held at the time of his death.

Wide Acquaintance With Actors. Few men had a wider acquaintance with the leading actors of the last and previous generations than Mr. Sessford, and his memory was replete with stories and anecdotes about all of them, from the elder Booth and Forrest down to John T. Japanese Textiles.

"Not only magnificent, but really astounding in its grandeur," was the opinion expressed by a competent critic who visited the art rooms of Marcus Notes, 1218-1220 F street, and viewed a collection of Japanese embroideries, silks and textiles there displayed. The assertion that certain of the fabrics of the collection are priceless, their real value not being known, conveys some sort of an idea of the nature of the exhibit. A number of the specimens shown were completed several centuries ago, having been brought, it is said, from Japanese museums, the palace of the Mikado, Buddhist temples and the store chests of the nobility. According to Mr. Nomura, who imported them, certain of the specimens of needlework he has brought from the land of the chrysanthemum required the constant services of a dozen or more experts for ten years to complete.

In striking contrast to this superb needlework of ancient times are samples of the modern art of Japan, designated the cut velvet art, so woven and cut as to repre-sent paintings. The effect is wonderful. The walls are covered with palace and temple hangings, the wealth of one of which it is difficult to express. It was hung, it is said, on the wall of the Nijio Palace of Kioto prior to the imperial restoration. Sacred dragons worked in subdued colors constitute the pattern.
